

DUKE UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW
SPEAKER COPYRIGHT RELEASE FORM

It is the law school's policy to disseminate and preserve presentations at events sponsored by the school and affiliated organizations.

Events are usually recorded; some events may be broadcast live via the Internet ("webcast") or by other means. Recordings of events will normally be catalogued, made available for viewing through our web site, and indexed in the library's public catalog. The recordings, or excerpts from them, including derivative works, may also be used for other purposes, including but not limited to the development of educational or other video products or continuing legal education materials. The recordings may be reproduced in copies or in derivative works, and may be distributed, performed or displayed as required or necessary for such purposes.

Contributor's presentation may be a contribution to a collective work, as defined in 17 U.S.C. 101 and 201c. As such the Duke University School of Law has the right to reproduce and distribute your contribution as part of the collective work.

Contributor grants to the Duke University School of Law a non-exclusive license to :

- a. transfer or grant sub-licenses to others so that the presentation may be broadcast, edited, reproduced on audio tape, video tape, or other media.
- b. reproduce or distribute such contributions or presentations for sale, archival or other purposes.

Subject to rights granted to the Duke University School of Law in this release, contributor retains all other rights to his or her work and presentation. Should contributor publish or give permission to publish this presentation at a later date, however, he or she shall indicate that the work was produced as part of that specific event in which it was presented.
