SUMMER INSTITUTE ON LAW, LANGUAGE, AND CULTURE

A preparatory course for foreign students and scholars adapting to U.S. law school

22 July - 14 August 2013
Duke University Law School
Introduction

Even for native speakers of English, U.S. law school can feel like a foreign world, with its own culture, language, and rules. A good introduction to this world is especially important for students or scholars who are not native English speakers. The Summer Institute on Law, Language, and Culture is designed to be just that introduction.

Course Description: SILLC is a four-week intensive course that will introduce students to legal English, the U.S. legal system, and the law school experience. Through small-group class interaction, encounters with lawyers, judges, and teachers, visits to courtrooms and law firms, and interaction with popular media, students will learn to read and produce good legal writing, to study and understand U.S. law, and to make the best possible use of their U.S. law school experiences.

The study of law is a language-intensive task. SILLC is very specifically designed to increase proficiency in reading and hearing English, to develop confidence and skill in speaking and writing, and to facilitate personal adjustment to the culture of U.S. legal education. Small class size and individual attention from the instructors will give students a concentrated and tailored teaching experience.

The Institute begins with an assessment of each participant’s abilities in spoken and written English. Students then work with the Institute instructors to develop a priority list of skills and subjects to work on during the four week program. The course combines classroom learning with experiential and tutorial methods to maximize each individual’s growth.

Participants spend an average of four hours of class time each day in lectures, tutorials, class discussions, field trips or media experiences. Preparation of research and writing assignments usually occupies another four hours each day.

SILLC students will work on developing the skills that will make their law school experience valuable, such as briefing cases and doing legal research and some introductory legal writing. Students will also visit courtrooms, interview lawyers and judges, and observe a first-year U.S. law school class.

Instructors: The course director and instructor is Hans Christian Linnartz, who teaches immigration law at Duke and is the head of the Linnartz Immigration Law Firm. Prof. Linnartz is licensed to practice in North Carolina and several federal district and appellate courts. He has lived in Indonesia and the Philippines and is fluent in bahasa Indonesia.

Also teaching in SILLC is Rima Idzelis, a lecturing fellow at the Duke, where she teaches U.S. Legal Analysis, Research, and Writing during the fall semester and an Advanced Legal Writing seminar in the spring semester. Among her many diverse and substantial legal experiences before coming to teach at Duke, Mrs. Idzelis assisted with the establishment of the first legal clinic at Petrozavodsk University in Karelia. She has lived in Lithuania and Germany and is fluent in Lithuanian.

Special Note: The Duke Law School International Studies Program encourages enrollment in the Institute for students who need to strengthen their English skills before entering the LLM program. The program has also proven highly effective for visiting international scholars.
Admission
Duke’s Summer Institute in Law, Language and Culture is designed for and limited to either students who will be attending Duke Law School through one of its International Graduate Studies programs, or those working at the Law School as visiting international scholars. Acceptance as a Duke LLM, SJD student, or visiting international scholar qualifies a student to enter SILLC.

Costs
SILLC tuition is $3,600 for the four-week course. A non-refundable deposit of $500 will secure your position after admission. The application fee, to accompany the application form, is $175. (The application fee does not apply to tuition, but is strictly for processing the application.) Personal expenses, including housing, utilities, food, etc., are not included. Students must make their own arrangements for housing.

Comments from former participants
“…a great way for me to improve and have more confidence in my English skills before the LLM program started.”

“…very interesting and intellectually enriching, and at the same time very fun.”

Special Features of the Program

- Visit to the North Carolina Supreme Court, guided by an Associate Justice.
- Visit to the Durham County Courthouse to see court in session; interview with a Judge.
- Visit and interview with a large law firm practicing international law, securities regulation, civil litigation, and intellectual property law.
- Intensive language practice, both oral and written
- Visits to law school classes in session
- Durham Bulls Baseball game
- Opportunities to share a meal and conversation with distinguished Duke Law School faculty members

Calendar

Monday, July 22:
Registration, diagnostics, orientation, classes begin.

Friday, July 26:
Family pizza party

Saturday, August 10:
International potluck dinner

Wednesday, August 14:
Oral Presentations and final group celebration; presentation of certificates

Students should plan to arrive in Durham before the start of SILLC classes in time to locate housing and settle personal and family needs. After classes start, free time will be very limited.
TO APPLY, COMPLETE THIS APPLICATION AND SEND IT BY APRIL 12, 2013, WITH THE $175 U.S. APPLICATION FEE, TO:

Hans Linnartz, SILLC, DUKE LAW SCHOOL, TOWERVIEW ROAD & SCIENCE DRIVE
DURHAM, NC 27708-0360 U.S.A. +1-919-613-7203 linnartz@law.duke.edu

SILLC 2013 Application

Name: ..........................................................................................................................

Male  Female

Current Address:  ........................................................................................................

Street

City  State / Prov.  Country  Postal Code

Address valid until (date): ..........................................................

Date of Birth: ___________________________  Place of Birth: ___________________________

Country of Citizenship: ..........................................................................................

Passport Number: ..................................................................................................

U.S. Social Security Number (if applicable): ............................................................

Telephone:  ________________  E-Mail / Fax: _________________________________

Emergency Contact:  ___________________________________________________________

Name / Relationship  Contact information / phone / e-mail

What languages do you speak fluently?

Previous English language education, TOEFL score, and experience:

Signature: ___________________________________________  Date: __________________