POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT: LEGAL RESEARCH INSTRUCTOR

The Duke Law School seeks a legal research instructor for one section of its co-taught, year-long Legal Analysis, Research & Writing (LARW) program, beginning in August 2012. This is a part-time appointment as Extended Faculty with the status of Lecturing Fellow or Senior Lecturing Fellow.

Description: The LARW program is a required, 3-credit hour course in the first two semesters of law school. Each research instructor is paired with a full-time writing instructor, and teaches a section of approximately 27 students throughout the year. Intensive blocks of research classroom teaching and small-group conference meetings take place during a three-week period in September/October and January/February. Additional office hours with students and weekly/biweekly meetings with the research instruction team are also expected.

More information about the required first-year LARW program can be found on the web at http://www.law.duke.edu/curriculum/legalwrit/index.

Qualifications: JD from an ABA-accredited law school is required. Master’s degree in library/information science is strongly preferred. Teaching experience, preferably in a law or other graduate/professional school setting, is strongly desired.

Compensation: Standard stipend for 1 credit hour of adjunct instruction.

To apply: Submit a CV/resume and the names of three references to Jennifer Behrens, Director of Legal Research Instruction (behrens@law.duke.edu). Applications will be reviewed until the position is filled. Duke University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer.
