Abstract:	The Duke Law School Miscellaneous Archives Collection consists of approx. 4590 items. These include correspondence, memoranda, and publications. The material is not considered the official records of the law school, such as records of the Registrar or the Dean's Office. Those records are held by University Archives. These materials concern events, conferences, publications, fund raising, and student activities. They are somewhat random and piecemeal items held by the law school departments that created them until their donation to the law library.

Content Description

The collection is composed of seven series: administrative, international studies, Board of Visitors and Law Alumni Association, faculty files, memorabilia, publications, and law library material. The majority of the collection was produced between 1990 and 2001, although a few items are much older. The publications series continues to the present. The administrative series contains information about law school centers and clinics, plans for events, fund raising, publicity, and student activities. Notable events described are the dedication of the new building wing in 1995, the law library's 500,000th volume ceremony and the Celebration of Women at Duke Law Symposium, both in 1997. There is also material on the planning and launch of the law school website in 1995. The international studies series consists of information on international students and fund raising in and travel to foreign countries. There is also material on a collaboration plan with Tsinghua University in China. The Board of Visitors and Law Alumni Association Materials series contains the meeting agendas of the Board of Visitors from 2006-2008. It also contains the agenda of a Law Alumni Association meeting in 2007. The Faculty/Staff series consists of files primarily created by the law school Communications department to collect material on each individual. The amount of material in these files varies greatly. Some contain only a photographic contact sheet from a photo shoot. Some contain curriculums vitae, publications, or news articles. The faculty members with the most material are Pamela Gann, Walter Dellinger, and Katherine Bartlett. The Memorabilia series contains objects that commemorate events or publicize the law school, in this case three t-shirts and a pen. The Publication series consists of materials in print produced by the law school. These include the programs or brochures of conferences, symposia, and lectures. The Publications/Promotional Material series includes a 1932 book honoring Samuel Fox Mordecai, and two other 1930's university publications autographed by Justin Miller. The group named Event-Related Material is concerned with law school events that were not conferences or lectures. This includes a sermon given by Dean Sneed in 1971 and a humorous description of the class of 1973 by graduate Rod Phelan. It also includes one of the oldest items in the collection, comedic lyrics about the law school experience to be sung to the tune of "The Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze." Although undated, the lyrics mention "Miss Loeb the belle of our law school." Edna Loeb was a member of the class of 1936. Internal Publications include Materials of the Bench & Bar Society of Duke University (1946-1951) and Minutes of Faculty Meetings (1972/73-1983/84). The series also includes proofs of the student photo book referred to as the "Facebook" and promotional material. The law library material contains a few items concerning the University Library, but the majority is specifically about the law school's library. It includes library guides and brochures, information on library-sponsored events, library and law school history, and material on the library's expansion and remodeling. Much of this material was formerly in the possession of long-time law library director Richard Danner, who was on the faculty 1979-2017. One exceptional item worthy of mention is the library's Comment & Grievance Book from 1973-74. This is a composition notebook where students could give feedback to the library staff. The notebook's entire contents have been scanned. The PDF is stored in the Box account of the Law Library's Technical Services Department.
