Biographical / Historical

Floyd Millard Riddick (July 13, 1908 – January 25, 2000) was a Parliamentarian of the United States Senate from 1964 to 1974, and is most famous for developing Riddick's Senate Procedure. Riddick was also a generous philanthropist to Duke Law School and Duke University. He funded the Goodson Law Library's Riddick Rare Book Room and most of his papers are held by the Rubenstein Rare Book and Special Collections Library. He is known for discussions of the censures of Joseph McCarthy and Thomas Dodd, the contested election between John A. Durkin and Louis Wyman, and the preparations for a planned impeachment trial of Richard Nixon. He advocated the change in the rules of cloture. A native of Trotville, North Carolina, Riddick received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Duke University and a master's degree from Vanderbilt in 1932. He received a Ph.D. in political science from Duke in 1935.
